VOL. 4.

HARTFORD, OHIO COUNTY, KENTUCKY, JULY 3, 1878.

For the Hartford Herald. TO A BEAR FRIEND FAR AWAY.

O'er the changing scenes of time, To my memory sailly suches Many thoughts of Auld Langsyne; In the thace of my fancy Still there lingering thoughts combine,

Of the pure, exalted virtue

In that friend I left behind. Ne'er can Time's relentless inroads Upon those things I love so well, In my heart of hearts diminish Love which only Death can still;

Many summer friends surround me, And many kind and true to me, Still that void is never sated

Save my thoughts are wrapt in thee. Those happy hours, we spent together,

But how sweet the consolation To my lonely heart is given, That if on earth we meet not ever We may meet again in Heaven.

If e'er on my fond heart's tablets A reminder of thee given;

Thou art far in real distance, But in Pancy's picasing train

And, perchance, howed down in pain, Thou hast given sweet assurance Which shall give me heart again.

Perhaps, when far on Life's vast ocean You cast a lingering look hehind, Love may be in some proportion In our friendship's wreath entwined.

If my frail bark, launch'd on Life's billows, Should their frenzied rage withstand, And should I ever be peermitted.
Again to see that distint land,

California Tule Wheat Fields.

In California they never talk about the number of bushels in a crop. It s always stated as so many tons. Speaking of the wheat crop reminds me of the tule lands, and the curious way of cultivating them. (Please pronounce tule as though it was spelt toola). Tule is the name of the reed that grows ten feet high on the soil. The tule lands are those vast alluvial bottoms in the great valleys, traversed by the larger rivers that come down from the mountains to the sa. The tains our oppressive tariff, and is the river banks are dyked by Chinese cheap labor to keep off the waters of the stream from the tule lands on which the crop is to be raised. Oh! how quickly were they passed, So replete with friendship's pleasure That the bright dream could not last:

Other true friends names are graven, May they serve in some slight measure Ne'er shall I forget the pleasure Of that woodland stroll with thee, When to me thou giv'st a treasure

Thou art lingering ever near me, Beguiling my sad heart from pain; Then if overcast with trouble,

On! how well do I remember,
That, sitting 'neath that old oak tree,
Thou to me didst give a promise
To ever true and taithful be.

Where thy bright and joyous presence Bids dull carer and sorrows ocase, There may I in perfect pleasure Pass my life with thee in peace.
